Community comes through for Rotary

Donation goal reached two days before Christmas party

LAKE COUNTY JOURNALS

FOX LAKE - The Fox Lake/Round Lake Rotary Club recently found gifts for close to 500 underprivileged Round Lake and Fox Lake area boys and girls.

After 35 years of providing needy local children with a holiday toy, a hot meal and other goodies at the George Watson Memorial Rotary Children's Christmas Party, organizers learned that Toys For Tots has changed its policy for distributing toys and thus would not be providing this year's toys.

Rather than disappoint the kids or cancel the party, which took place Dec. 7, Rotary members mobilized area businesses to gather donations of toys and money to fill the need.

Within days, several leading area businesses responded by donating toys or cash to buy gifts for the children.

"Tuesday, [Dec. 2], we had nothing," Greater Round Lake Area Fire Chief Paul Maplethorp said. "I was worried we weren't going to have the funds to pull it off."

Fox Lake/Round Lake Rotary Club President Kay Starostovic said the first word of the Rotary Club's need went out on Dec. 2.

By Dec. 5, enough gifts had been donated for the annual party. Starostovic called the party "very, very successful."

"You put that little white flag out there and the people are there for you," she said.

Toy donations came from across the area, both in and around Lake County, she said. "This was just a fantastic event."

"The community really came together," Maplethorp said. "It was great."

The party is intentionally not open to the public. Instead, the children who attend the annual rotary event are hand-selected and individually invited by the area school administration. This assures that children who need Christmas support are recipients of the party donations.

Students at Antioch Upper Grade School prepare holiday cards for soldiers stationed in Iraq.

Students send holiday cheer to soldiers in Iraq

By ANDRE TRIPLETT

antioch@lakecountyjournals.com

ANTIOCH — Some students at Antioch Upper Grade School have been busy helping U.S. soldiers in Iraq.

Sixth-graders at the school gathered Dec. 2 to assemble care packages for Sgt. Joe Perminas and other soldiers in that unit who are serving overseas.

"It's important to support them, so they don't lose spirit and hope in this war," said student Danielle Sychowski, age 11.

Perminas, a 1992 graduate of Antioch Upper Grade School, has been in contact with the students at the school since 2004, when one of the sixth-grade advisory groups at that time adopted his unit.

During a recent visit to the Antioch school, Perminas spoke at an assembly and explained what life is like for soldiers and for Iraqi students.

"The kids have defiantly been touched by him and his mission," sixth-grade teacher Barb Regan said. "The kids even brought in their Halloween candy for the kids in Iraq."

For the care-package project, sixth-grade students teamed up with many members in the Antioch community, including Perminas' mother, Sheryl, who helped collect donations on Veterans Day; and the VFW Post 4551 Ladies Auxiliary, which helped raise money to pay for delivery of the packages.

The Ladies Auxiliaries has done a number of fundraisers on behalf of local soldiers, but this was its first event that involved students.

"It's nice to know the kids are this involved," Ladies Auxiliary President Barbra Gray said. Regan continued the thought.

"The kids have really taken this on," she said. "I'm surprised at how responsive they are to [the needs of student in Iraq] and how much empathy they have for the other kids. It is cool. I'm touched by it."

The 32 care packages that were created at Antioch Upper Grade School should reach the soldiers by Christmas.

Sisters create baby-oriented Web site

By COLIN SELBO
cselbo@nwnewsgroup.com

LINDENHURST — When sisters Nanette Fraser, Carolyn Hansen and Jennifer Parent had a difficult time finding resources about raising a baby on the Internet, they decided to take action.

The three sisters teamed up earlier this year to launch the start of www.sisters4.com. The Web site is designed to bring helpful resources for parents raising babies, particularly in the Chicagoland area, together into one central location.

As three sisters who are comfortable going to each other for advice, they want visitors to www.sisters4.com to be the fourth sister in a conversation among sisters.

"We kind of just wanted a laid-back feel," Fraser said. "The three of us sisters are very close, and we go to each other for pretty much anything."

Fraser and Hansen both live in Lindenhurst, while Parent is a resident of Waukegan. Work on the Web site began in February 2008, and today includes a wide range of resources, including podcasts, an online forum and information about current recalls of baby products.

What makes the site unique, the sisters said, is the focus on area businesses. The site is designed so that viewers can find local alternatives to buying baby products, instead of just buying at large, national chains. The Web site's resource guide contains information about day care centers, toy stores, clothing stores and even children's charities, all from the Chicagoland area.

"We don't want it so general that you lose that community feeling," Hansen said. "There are some things we put up ourselves. Other places have contacted us and asked to be a part of our resource guide."

The Web site is designed to be interactive, with much of the content coming from visitors to the site.

"The big thing I really want to do is more networking with local businesses," Fraser said. "If you know of a local business you love, you can add it to the resource guide yourself."

"We're not just straight forward, click, get information and read an article," she said. The sisters also do their own reviews of baby products and encourage viewers to do the same. The forum also has online deals at local stores to pass along.

In addition, the sisters have created their own clothing line for babies and sell the products through the Web site.

With all three sisters working full time, finding time to work on the site is not easy. But the sisters say they work well together and can bounce ideas off each other.

Each sister brings a separate talent to the table. Hansen has experience with graphic design, while Fraser works on podcasts and the business side of the operation.

"We always knew we wanted to do something of our own business together," Hansen said.

At this point, Parent is the only sister with a baby of her own, but all three are certainly learning the ropes of what is needed to raise a baby.

"It's great to already immerse ourselves in the baby world," Hansen said. "Our poor husbands, too, they've learned a lot."

Officials: Economy to blame for project delay

By COLIN SELBO
cselbo@nwnewsgroup.com

LINDENHURST — The economic slowdown hitting communities across the country has put the brakes on the Village Green retail development, officials said.

Lindenhurst officials and developer Oliver McMillan announced last month that the targeted date of completion for the project now stands at 2011, with construction beginning in 2010.

The original target date of completion for the project was fall 2009.

Village Administrator Matt Formica said the necessity of the announcement did not take the village by surprise.

"It was something that we saw coming and expected in the current economic conditions. We were excited about the fact that progress is still being made," he said.

Formica noted that the project is still moving forward and does not change the original plans.

"This is the reality of [the economy,]" he said. "If we had our choice, we'd have it open today."

The Village Green project is a proposed center of approximately 450,000 square feet of retail space, located near the corner of Route 45 and Grand Avenue in Lindenhurst.

"Due to the current economic climate, retailers have become more cautious and this has caused an adjustment in the construction time table," said Charlie Hickcox, development director for Oliver McMillan, in a release. Formica echoed those concerns.

"The retailers out there are starting to cut back on new store openings," Formica said.

Mayor Susan Lahr said the estimated cost of $34.5 million for the project remains the same, despite the delay in construction.

"It's been a little bit of a long process, but we feel that it's still on track," Lahr said. "Over the past year and a half, we've continued to move forward with developing what the infrastructure will look like."

The village is monitoring economic developments, she said, and will continue work as conditions improve.

"When the timing is right we absolutely will have everything we need to move forward in getting the project back on track," she said.

Sequoit girls use team effort to bring wins

By COLIN SELBO

ANTIOCH – Less than a month into the season, the Antioch varsity girls basketball team will face its biggest test of this year's campaign – when the Wauconda Bulldogs visit the Sequoits this weekend.

When the Sequoits (4-4) take on their undefeated North Suburban Conference Prairie Division rival Wauconda (6-0) on Friday, Dec. 12, it will be the first home game in nearly a month for the squad. Head coach Tim Borries said his team will be glad to return to familiar territory.

"It's nice to play in our own gym that we practice in," Borries said. "Shooting-wise, you're more familiar in your own gymnasium."

The Sequoits are playing without the services of sophomore guard Andi Potkonjak, who was named to the all-conference team as a freshman.

Potkonjak was sidelined with an ACL injury in the team's first game of the season, and the adjustment has required other players to step up, Borries said.

"It's more of a team effort running the point guard," he said. "Everybody knows they have to help out. We're keeping turnovers down, which helps."

Borries pointed to contributions from freshman guard Lindsey Gofron and senior guard Katrina Holm as a key for the Sequoits as they work around Potkonjak's injury.

Antioch has already recorded two big victories over the season, a 57-53 victory over Providence High School during the Geneva High School Tournament on Nov. 22, and a 47-46 victory over Grant on Dec. 2. The win against Grant saw Brittany Deem sink the winning basket with five seconds left in the fourth quarter.

Borries said the team's efforts that contributed to those wins is something the team wants to build on in upcoming games.

In addition to working on getting more high percentage shots on offense, Borries stressed the team wants to aggressively attack on defense in order to force turnovers.

"Every game we go in and we just try to play better than average defense. We want to be the best defensive team on the court," he said.

Wauconda head coach Jaime Weber is aware that Potkonjak is out with an ACL injury, but she has her own injuries to deal with.

Senior Kristin Brown is out for the season with a ACL injury, and sophomore Roslyn Summerville is out for a short time due to a minor head injury suffered in practice. Weber's squad is down to eight players with those two injuries.

"Antioch's always a pretty good match-up with us; they've very scrappy," Weber said. "Much like our match-up with Grant, it's always physical with Grant, and we expect the same with Antioch."

Although all division games are critical, Borries said the end of the season is what really counts.

"It's not how we play in the beginning of the year," he said. "As long as we can play our best ball in the middle in January, we'll be OK."

Views on Dental Health

Dr. Brian Gniadek & Associates in the Linden Plaza in Lindenhurst

Do Mouthwashes Work?

So far only a very few mouthwash products have been approved by the American Dental Association. One of these is available only by prescription. Although the best of these, when tested, reduced plaque and gingivitis by much less than 50%, the reduction must be considered significant. If gingivitis could be reduced by using a mouth wash by even 20%, the effects would be considered very meaningful. Any program of oral hygiene designed to control gingivitis would have to include the use of a twice-a-day rinse. The typical regimen would also include thorough brushing and flossing at least twice a day. Studies have also given high marks to the use of oral irrigators using these recommended mouthwash products.

Don't buy a product because of the taste or the promise of "fresh breath."

Buy a product that does the job and bears the official approval seal of the ADA. Don't expect a daily swish or two of any mouth rinse to eliminate plaque or cure gingivitis single-handedly.

Four-day school week is a bad idea

The long, crippling escalation of gas pump prices led to many adjustments in the private and public sectors. Some school districts across the country may have reacted too swiftly by instituting a four-day school week.

It has been reported that most of the districts – about 100 in 17 states – are from rural areas. I wonder if those districts will re-evaluate now that fuel prices are returning to some sense of normality.

When radical steps such as going to a four-day school week are taken, my concern is that it might trigger a copy-cat permanent "solution," sold as a cure-all to the economic downturn. It is something that parents and educators should fight against.

You can call it a four-day week, but it still amounts to 40 hours, packed into four days. I have read that proponents of the four-day week assert that standardized test scores are unaffected by shorter weeks. I have long maintained that you can rationalize any side of most issues and sound reasonable, but common sense tells me that a shorter school week makes no sense.

To me, any analysis of whether a four-day school conversion is worthwhile ought to consider first what is best for children. We must then consider what is best for families, teachers, and community. I believe students learn more during an eight-hour day.

Every morning, I have coffee with Charles Willms, who in his retirement has become a dedicated substitute teacher of first- and second-graders. I asked Chuck how young students would react to lengthening a school day by two hours. He said that they are getting tired enough by lunch and the longer the school day, the more difficult classroom instruction becomes.

John S.

Willms said teachers work very hard and their preparation often begins an hour before classes. Many stay after the day's end. So, for teachers, it's longer than a 10-hour day. He said that the stress of a longer school day would adversely affect both teachers and students.

Homework is a part of education, too. After a 10-hour day in school, does the student have the time, energy, or will to complete homework? I doubt it.

School districts say that they went to the shorter week to cut costs. Did they consider that they added costs for parents who have to pay day-care costs for the full day when the child is home alone?

What about the families that can't afford day-care? Do some opt to leave children unattended?

Isn't it a shame that when things get economically tough, the children are the first victims of the budget ax. The policymakers think of all kinds of schemes to bail out the high and the mighty, but the children have to fend for themselves, often unattended.

The road to educational achievement cannot be met by a short-cut shift of classroom instruction to four days. Our school children deserve more.

Joy to the world?

To the Editor:
It's natural to think of gatherings at home and being with family during the holiday season. For most people this is an enjoyable annual tradition that they look forward to. But for survivors of sexual assault and incest, the holidays can be a difficult and stressful time of year. Unfortunately, their home and family might be the very things that make the holidays burdensome.

The holidays regularly include mandatory get-togethers with seldom seen family members with whom socialization is minimal. Occasionally, the family is the place where a survivor was not supported during her (or his) ordeal, making intimate gatherings strenuous and painful.

While it may be more comfortable for people to think that most sexual assaults are perpetrated by unknown strangers or random attackers, in truth the vast majority (85 percent) of all sexual assaults are committed by someone the survivor knows and trusts. For obvious reasons, those who have been assaulted or molested by a family member don't enjoy spending time with them.

By having to see people they might otherwise avoid, survivors are often triggered into remembering aspects of their abuse that might not be an issue other times of the year. As a result, depression may be more pronounced and anxiety levels higher as these individuals are faced with reminders of painful incidents and occurrences.

If you are a survivor facing the holidays with something less than excitement and anticipation, remember to set realistic goals for yourself about what you can and cannot handle regarding family gatherings. It's OK to say no and to be assertive about your needs and concerns. But try not to focus on the negative aspects of the coming season. Instead, make a list of the things you are looking forward to doing and the people with whom you are looking forward to seeing.

If you know a survivor who is facing a difficult holiday season, you can help to reduce his or her trauma by simply being there and listening to fears and concerns. The key is to be respectful of their feelings and supportive of how difficult this time of year can be.

Remember that Zacharias Sexual Abuse Center's (formerly LaCASA) hotline is 847-872-7799. Its Web site www.ZachariasCenter.org. Our counselors and advocates offer many services that could ease some of the difficulties that may arise this upcoming holiday season.

Not the time

To the Editor:

In reference to Sen. Dick Durbin's attempt to shorten the prison term of former Illinois Gov. George Ryan, we do not need to look very far to understand the reasons for Durbin's publicity campaign to commute convicted felon Ryan's prison term.

The Democratic senator is laying the groundwork for Gov. Blagojevich's commutation of the governor's conviction.

Zion reactor deserves second look

To the Editor:

Zion's dual-reactor nuclear power plant was built by ComEd in 1973. Both units were retired on Feb. 13, 1998. Fuel has been removed, and they are now in safe storage until both licenses expire Nov. 14, 2013, after which decontamination and dismantlement are to begin.

At a time when coal and oil are condemned as energy sources because the CO2 produced is being blamed for global warming, nuclear reactors are reliable solutions to providing energy needs.

Given president-elect Barack Obama's announced cap and trade policy to cut carbon emissions by a 80 percent by 2020, it would be economic suicide for this nation not to invest in more nuclear power. Europe is way ahead of America in using nuclear energy. France gets 77 percent of its electricity from nuclear reactors.

Recently, I spoke with David

Hollein, formerly the Westinghouse project engineer for all the Commonwealth Nuclear Plants built by Westinghouse and General Electric.

Mr. Hollein believes there was no need to shutter the two Zion plants.

The Zion plants were included in a list of Westinghouse nuclear plants as part of a multi-utility steam generator court suit, but the closing of the two Zion plants was never the thrust of this suit. What transpired was an agreement being made between ComEd and Westinghouse to shut down the Zion plants shortly after Hollein's two days of testimony. ComEd also had the court seal the agreement with Westinghouse.

In David Hollein's opinion, both Zion plants could be safely operated beyond any initial design life time.

It is time for residents to call their state representatives and senators to demand answers. The General Assembly should invite David Hollein to present his findings. Public hearings are also called for. Refusing to build or use existing nuclear plants here in Illinois and across this nation could result in a substantial loss of this country's standard of living.

A few favorite things

Here are a few of "my favorite things" about the holidays. Julie Andrews, or I should say, whoever wrote the classic song, please forgive me.

Come on, sing along with me.

Footed jammies on babies and Santa on TV

"No, the special's not over. It's just a commercial. See?"

"Jingle Bell" car rides with fights over who sings

These are a few of my favorite things

Attempts at Christmas card pictures and marker-covered bellies

Sugar high crashes and "That diaper's smelly."

Half-eaten candy canes stuck to just about everything

These are a few of my favorite things

Bright snowy mornings and "Look what I did!" messes

Cups of hot chocolate that spill onto little red dresses

"Oh, but she'd love that. I'll just buy this one more thing."

These are a few of my favorite things.

(So there's really not a fourth or fifth verse before the chorus, but I have to fill my column space, so please bear with me.)

Pictures of Santa with screaming babies

"You'd better be good," "He's watchin'," and "We'll see. OK. Maybe."

Half-built snowmen that melt into springs

These are a few of my favorite things

Toy packages that take a chainsaw to break

Broken gingerbread houses, pink frosting fingers and cookies just baked

Kids at church pageants wearing tiny white angel wings

These are a few of my favorite things

When the glove's lost

When the snow stings

When they're feeling sad

I simply remember how one day I'll miss these favorite things

And then I don't feel so bad

SMASHING PUMPKINS
"If All Goes Wrong" DVD set
($14.99-$21.99)

This two-DVD package chronicles the beginning of the new Smashing Pumpkins, which reformed in 2007 with original members Billy Corgan and Jimmy Chamberlain and three new people. One disc presents a live show (assembled from multiple concerts in San Francisco) that's likely to interest only die-hard fans of the neo-Pumpkins, despite looking and sounding good. The music is another matter. None of the Chicago band's best-known – or just plain best – songs made the setlist, which focuses on "Zeitgeist"-era songs, "Machina" material and stuff Corgan had written in the past month. Disc one includes a fascinating feature-length documentary about the Pumpkins twin 2007 residencies in North Carolina and California. Superfans will relish the chance to go backstage and see a bathrobe-clad Corgan write new songs or ruminate on just what he's trying to do with the new lineup. The rest of us get to marvel at the frontman's fractured, fragile ego as he lashes out at fans who only want to hear the hits and bristles at the suggestion that former guitarist James Iha held a creative role in the band (then throwing his guitar across the room). In the evening we see Corgan playing and pontificating in front of music hall crowds (some rapt, some disappointed). In the daytime, we watch him skulking around town, rambling about how he keeps trying to write the "next great song" and yearning to be perceived as an "important" artist once again.

"Murmur: Deluxe Edition" CD
($22.99-$27.99)

Arguably the band's finest release, R.E.M.'s first album gets cleaned up and added an extra disc for its 25th birthday. This "Deluxe Edition" becomes the preferred way to experience the murky "Murmur" because a feather-touch remastering job has deepened the details of this classic – which features "Radio Free Europe" and "Talk About the Passion" – without lifting the mysterious fog that seems to cling to the music like the kudzu attached to the ground on the album's cover. "Murmur," which combined the New York jitters with Southern soul, post-punk precision with haunting elegance, remains a record that exists out of time (to reappropriate a different R.E.M. album title). The bonus disc contains an entire concert, proving how formidable a live force R.E.M. had already become by 1983. The Georgian quartet roll up their sleeves to reveal their punk influences on stage, and this Toronto show bounds forward on the strength of Mike Mills' wandering bass, Bill Berry's R&B pounding, Michael Stipe's hurtled wail and Peter Buck's prickly jangle. The live recording is the perfect compliment to a perfect album.

CHEAP TRICK
"At Budokan!" CD/DVD
($29.99-$49.99)

They (still) want you to want them. This four-disc set (three CDs, one DVD) is the ultimate tribute to Cheap Trick's star-making album, "At Budokan." Not only does this 30th anniversary edition include a two-CD, "complete" version of the Rockford Four's 1978 concerts, but also an hourlong film of the concert. It's the first time this footage – shot for a one-time only broadcast in Japan – has been seen anywhere since '78. It's pretty cool to see nerdy Rick Nielsen make his guitar roar through "Surrender" or golden god Robin Zander growl through "Auf Wiedersehen" as throngs of Japanese girls worship their colorful rock 'n' roll heroes. Although the video isn't hi-def quality, the sound has been remastered for 5.1 surround sound, making "Budokan" sound way better than it ever did on the radio of your Chevette. A CD containing all the music from the DVD (plus a few more that were cut for TV time) is a fine, although superfluous addition to the set: Another quailm is the lack of availability of a cheaper, DVD-only edition of "Budokan!" so that fans wouldn't have to purchase the album again. On its own merits, however, it's a wonderful set.

Spellbinding stagecraft in 'Maids'

By TOM WITOM
tjedit@nwnewsgroup.com

Reality clashes with fantasy in French playwright Jean Genet's 1948 dark, edgy drama, "The Maids," now seen in a sophisticated, contemporary production flawlessly performed at Writers' Theatre in Glencoe under the smart direction of Jimmy McDermott.

Based on shocking real-life events that occurred in 1933 in Le Mans, France, the 90-minute three-character play, performed without intermission, mixes role playing and acting out with deadly consequences.

While their mistress is away from the house, two young housemaids make themselves at home in her bedroom, where they engage in a weird game in which they assume different identities, trade insults and give full reign to their love-hate relationship.

Both feel invisible, friendless and unappreciated — stifled by their circumstances and thoroughly bored with their uneventful lives. As a way of spicing things up, they have anonymously sent information to the police putting their mistress' lover in the frame as a thief. Now, relentlessly pursuing escapism, their "game" is escalating as they take a murder plot ever closer to the edge.

The spiteful, calculating maids are played by Elizabeth Laidlaw as the older sister Solange and Helen Sadler as Claire, her out-of-control younger sib.

Together, the women make a terrifying duo — and a wicked cup of chamomile tea intended for The Mistress, played by Niki Lindgren, the flighty, imperious and terribly rich employer. One moment she's distraught over her lover's unexpected incarceration and talking about going into mourning by giving up her fancy clothes to the maids, while the next she is accusing them of filling her boudoir with an abundance of flowers as if it were a tomb.

The Grape Vine Restaurant: Fine Dining In Island Lake

By LESLIE GLAZIER-WERNER

The Grape Vine Restaurant in Island Lake offers a fine dining experience not to be missed.

Owners Chef Bob Janz and his wife Maria, along with partners Mike and Brigitte Ellis, strive for excellence in every detail. As a result, the restaurant has established a solid reputation for quality, value and service.

The extensive menu reflects Chef Bob's more than 30 years of culinary experience. Chef Bob was formerly executive chef of Chessie's in Barrington, then Marlowe's in Palatine, before opening The Grape Vine Restaurant in 2004.

"Everything on the menu is made from scratch from original recipes," Chef Bob said. "I prepare food with an Italian, regional American, or multi-ethnic influence using only the finest, freshest ingredients."

Chef Bob said the restaurant's signature dishes include the sesame-seared tuna and the Gorgonzola encrusted steak, as well as their homemade ravioli. You can also choose from appetizers like steamed blue mussels, homemade soups, salads, sandwiches, entrees like grilled salmon Portobello, and tempting desserts, such as their signature chocolate mousse tower.

In addition, Bob said The Grape Vine offers pizza "that food critics and pizza aficionados agree is the best pizza around." Finally, you can complement your meal by ordering one of their boutique wines by the glass or bottle, a specialty martini, or choosing from an assortment of imported and domestic beers.

The Grape Vine also offers daily specials. I tried a selection from their "recession menu" offered Thursday through Sunday. Ten "recession buster meals" are featured for $10 each. These smaller portions of their regular gourmet fare are a real value. I enjoyed one of their most popular items, the "smothered sirloin" consisting of six ounces of London broil, grilled onions, and mushrooms covered in a rich Bordeaux wine sauce. This was paired with a helping of their tasty, garlic mashed potatoes. This "smaller" serving was more than ample, especially accompanied by the fresh, homemade loaf of bread.

The restaurant has the casual feel of a European bistro and the attentive service that makes dining out a pleasure. But if you elect, all menu items are available for carry out or delivery. Delivery is available to Island Lake, Wauconda, Cary, Tower Lakes, Barrington, and parts of McHenry.

"We offer affordable catering for parties up to 50, or up to 300 at several offsite banquet facilities," Bob added. "We also hold monthly wine dinners with different featured themes." He said more information about these dinners is available on the restaurant's Web site.

Finally, Chef Bob's own line of homemade sauces, dressings, and spice blend is available at the restaurant or on the Internet.

Again, the restaurant's fine cuisine, excellent service, and warm ambiance make a visit to "Wine & Dine at the Vine" a must for your next night out.

HOLIDAY TRADITIONS

Create a Vacation Experience at Home for the Holidays

(MS)—Many signs point to curbed holiday travel for people around the country. Rises in fuel prices have caused airlines to pass on fees and surcharges to riders. Cut service, reduced amenities and pumped-up ticket prices are all trickle-down effects of the fuel price surge.

In the wake of fuel costs and reduced business, some airlines have disbanded. Additionally, the Official Airline Guide (OAG) reports that an anticipated 60 million seats on flights will be eliminated for the fourth quarter of 2008 – just in time for the peak travel season. For those who are traveling for Thanksgiving, Chanukah or Christmas, experts advise booking flights early to ensure the best deals and a seat.

Although the holiday season is traditionally a busy time for travel, many will forego flights and road trips this year and opt to spend the holidays at home. But doing so doesn't mean one has to go without the benefits a holiday vacation typically would provide. A wintertime "staycation" can be just as enjoyable when you employ a few techniques to increase the comfort factor.

- Set aside a week and act as you would on vacation. While on vacation, mealtimes are often lax, beds go unmade, and a laissez faire attitude ensues. If you're at home, keep up the same come-what-may attitude. Ask friends or relatives who are seeking gift ideas to provide gift certificates for area restaurants or at-home catering, so you don't have to lift a finger in the kitchen. Another indulgence is to have a housekeeper come in a few times during the week to take care of cleaning chores.

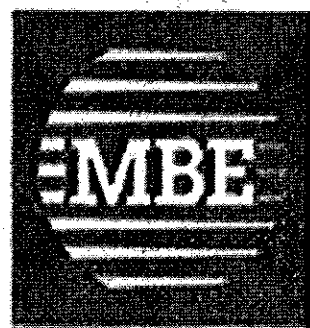

- Plan an at-home vacation itinerary. If your idea of a vacation is sitting with your feet up watching television, so be it. But if you yearn for a little more action, plan some excursions the entire family will enjoy. Now Enjoy all of the amenities of a vacation even if you're staying home this holiday season. It is the time to visit all of those tourist attractions in your hometown that you may overlook because you're not a tourist. So if you're a New Yorker, visit the observation deck of the Empire State Building. If you're a Texan, go see the Alamo. Those living in California should get to the San Diego Zoo. Take advantage of Duck tours and narrated bus rides to learn some unknown facts. When will you have the chance again?

- Give a gift that pampers. Many people who go on vacation treat themselves to a massage or a spa treatment. There's no reason not to enjoy the same level of pampering even on a staycation. Many salons and spas offer holiday gift promotions that are perfect for those who need a little recharging and relaxation. Again, these make great gift ideas if someone is stumped on a holiday present.

- Turn a stay-at-home holiday into one where you rest, recharge and enjoy the benefits for which vacations are famous.
